CATHOLIC LAYMEN,

Closing Their Great Congress at Baltimore To-Day.

Papers Treating Vital Interests of the Church and State.

A Remarkable Address by Prime Minister Mercler, of Quebec.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 12 .- Out of the excitement and gayety of last night's reception by Cardinal Gibbons to the deligates to the Catholic Congress Concordia Hall emerged again to-day into the intellectual calmness of the Congress's second day's session.

This session was to be the concluding one. though nine out of twelve papers remained to be read.

The delegates and spectators were as enthusiastic as at vesterday's meetings and the utterances of the various speakers were as full of earnest purpose.

Hon. Honore Mercier, Prime Minister of Quebee, addressed the Congress by special invitation and aroused frequent bursts of ap-vitation and aroused frequent bursts of applause.

The sentiments he expressed were thoroughly loyal to the Church and thoroughly American.

As to the status of Catholica, "said he, "whether in Canada or the United States, the world should know that loyalty to God means loyalty to the State."

Mr. Mercier closed his address with a quotation from Longfellows "Ship of State," so accented as to leave the impression that it expressed the feelings of Quebec; towards the great American Union.

Following the Premier's address, the Congress adopted a resolution tendering the most cordial greetings to the people of Canada and acknowledging their warm sentiments of regard.

acknowledging their warm sensiments of regard.

One of the most important papers of the day was presented by William L. Kelly, of St. Paul. under the title "Religion in Education."

He referred to the system of American public schools as a magnificent one, and said that in them as in the Holy Church is taught the equality and brotherhood of man.

"Bring back to their teaching positive religion, so that the children may appreciate that fatherhood of God, and we have the perfect school."

Practically, Mr. Kelly claimed that there are but four divisions of the people in America—Catholics, Protestants, Israelites and unbelievers. A system perfectly adapted to this division was far from an impracticability, and the writer believed it would yet be applied.
In treating of "societies" and their possible benefits, Mr. H. F. Spaunhorst, of St. Louis, urged all Catholics to join some society, and Suggested a plan for the organization of representative Catholics into diocesan and parish societies.

sentative Catholics into diocesan and parish sociaties.

He dipped a bit into the question of politics, too, claiming that the number of Catholic legislators at present is very sinall compared to what the proport on of population would justify. Conde B. Pallin, of St. Louis, read a paper on "Catholic American Literature," and Manly B. Tello, of Cleveland, took up the subject of "Sunday Observance."

In dealing with this question, he held that the Catholic has to do with the rights of others, and has to take into practical consideration the state of American society in which he lives.

The prevailing manners of the country in kind, though not always in degree, are to be supported.

and has to take into practical consideration the state of American society in which he lives.

The prevailing manners of the country in kind, though not always in degree, are to be supported.

"The dominant manners of our country," said he, 'are the manners of Americans, and we are Americans.

He urged Catholics, despite rebuff and injustice, overlooking zealory, to seek alliance with Protestant Christians for securing the proper observance of Sunday.

The reception of last evening has left most pleasant memorics.

So interested were the delegates in each other, indeed, that their attention had several times to be called to the fact that speakers on the platform were addressing them.

Outside of the hall the city was brilliantly and beautifully illuminated for the evening in all directions.

The Cathedral was ablaze with electric lights.

The Cathedral was ablaze with electric lights. The Cathedral was ablaze with electric lights, and so were other churches, many residences and the Catholic institutions of the city.

At St. Alphonsus Church the entire outlines of the building were illuminated by variegated lamps, and in the windows of the rectory over three hundred candles were burning.

Red lights were burned about the spire to show off the decorations of evergreens and flags which beautify the edifice by day.

Loyela College, St. Ignatius's Church. St. James's. St. John's. St. Paul's—all had their flags and banners and evergreens, and all were lighted up by candle and electricity.

Six hundred flags and as many Japanese lanterns were hung about St. Many's Seminary.

The effect of the lights on all the great buildings was grand beyond description.

But brilliant as were the scenes of last night, it is expected that to-night's display will eclipse them all.

A great torchlight procession is planned for

"What kind of a now buggy?"

There was a buzz of excitement at this, for everybody in the court-room could but remember the color of the horse which, on May 4, Dan Caughlin hired for his friend Smith.

them all.

A great torchlight procession is planned for this eventug, in which from fifteen thousand to twenty thousand men are to take part.

This will close the great church event so far as Baltimore is concerned, for to-morrow the delegates and the clergy will go to Washington to attend the dedication of the new Catholic University.

PEERLESS SUNOL. (From Last Night's Sporting Extra.)

The general topic of conversation this mornng among horsemen and admirers of horseflesh was Mr. Robert Bonner's purchase of Sunol, the great three-year-old trotting filly, with a record of 2, 10%, made last Saturday a San Francisco.

Now the experts are wondering what Mr. Bonner will do with Maud S., the famous trotting record holder of the world, with 2,08% to her credit; whether or not he will relegate her to the ranks of the brood mares.

Though the purchase of Sunol has been con-summated, the famous flyer will not be brought East probably till next Spring.

The purchase price has not as yet been made public, but is undoubtedly in the neighborhood public, but is undoubtedly in the neighborhood of $50, 000.

Mr. Benner has not bought Sunol with the intention of putting her on the race track. Like Mand S., the noble animal will be used only as an expensive toy by Mr. Benner, to be driven by its master over the fine reads of the northern section of this city, varied by an occasional spin on a private track.

Next season it is Mr. Benner's intention to make a try at the record with both Mand S. and Sunol.

The offer for the coming champion trotter of the world was made to Senstor Leland Stanford Oct. 26.

Mr. Bonner received a letter yesterday from Senstor Stanford accepting his offer.

Mr. Bonner has had his attention directed to the wonderful filly for some time past, and has kept accurately posted regarding every detail appertaining to the mare and her performances. As, far back as two months ago Count Valensin, an Italian, who has studied horse-breeding in California for a long time, wrote to Mr. Bonner, with whom he was acquainted, telling him what a remarkable filly Sunol was and that, in his opinion, she was undoubtedly a world beater.

Sunol is thoroughbred cross, the product of a system of breeding that is rapidly gaining ground among trotting men.

This new theory is that the tho oughbred cross in strain is a powerful factor in producing animals of speed and endurance.

Sunol is by Electioneer, a son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Her dam is Waxana, by Gen. Benton, second dam Waxy, by Lexington.

Sunol is a beautifully formed animal and very spirited. Great care has been exercised in training her to bring her courage to the highest point. She is a dark bay.

Sunol was bred and reared at Senator Stanford's world-famed Palo Alto stables.

GIVE THEM BACK THEIR MUSIC.

AIMED AT CRIPPLES. AT BAR FOR MURDER.

Real Suffering is Caused by the Ordi- William Blauvelt on Trial for the nance Against Street Music.

"It is a serious matter to deprive a man of his means of making a living for himself and family," said a thoughtful Twenty-ninth street norning, "but that is just what the anti-street music ordinance of the Board of Aldermen has done to probably six thousand men.

"And the City Fathers seem to have done it consideration to the subject. Now, what de-struction of the peace of the city did these gruesome organ-grinders do that they deserve to be ontlawed and deprived of their only means of ceeping bread in the mouths of their babes?

"These strolling musicians made all the children happy. There were two young Italians who visited our block regularly every Monday with a piano organ. One turned the crank to such lively airs as 'Johnny, Get Your Gun, and the other capered and danced and bowed and turned with the grace and agility of a trained bear.

'Now my Mamie has been ill for ten days, and yesterday the little five-year-old stood long at the front window looking wistfully out upon the atreet. At last she heaved a sigh.

'Oh dear! Why don't my music come? I shall die if I don't see my little men pretty soon. These strolling musicians made all the

and the loss of the pennies freely given is a serious calamity to these simple amusers of the children.

Letters come to The Eversino World in the same strain, while others direct attention specially to the hardships entailed to the poor organ-grinders.

There is many a veteran maimed in his country's cause or poor fellow deprived of sight who has found in the discordant hand-organ a means of keeping his family together and out of the almshouse; but these poor fellows are cut off and left without means of support by this ordinance, and starvation is staring them in the face. Added to this horror is the greater one that they may be separated from their loved ones—their wives and children—by unryinpathetic public charity.

There are large factories in the city where organs are made, and the manufacturers say that most of the poor fellows compelled to resort to this way of making a living have no expital to begin with and purchase their organs on the instalment plan. Many such are yet in debt for their instruments, and these must, of course, not only lose their instruments but all the hard earned money which they have aiready paid.

Nobody is compelled to give an organ-course, not only lose their instruments but all the hard earned money which they have aiready paid.

"Nobody is compelled to give an organgrinder anything," said Moimari, the Elizabeth street manufacturer, who is returning the money aiready paid to him on fifty organs.

"But every one who does drop a penny or two into the tin cup of some blind, armless, legices, old or decrepit street unusician, heips to keep him out of the almshouse and to keep his family as dearly as does a resident of Fifth avenue. He loves the place he calls his home. There is not for him in the greetings of his wife, the antics of his children. And certainly these poor fellows do not compete with organized labor.

"God help the poor fellows and their families. There is a long and dreary Winter before them if the Board of Aldermen does not repeal the law it has made."

would be sent him with signatures of hundreds of teachers.
This is a very diplomatically drawn instrument, in which the teachers deny any intent to recommend or oppose the appointment of any person for School Commissioner, but simply certify that their views were not represented or expressed in the petition asking the retirement of Commissioners Agnew and Dodge, recently presented to the Mayor by tive school principals.

Mayor Grant simply stated that he has as yet not made up his mind as to the action he will take in the matter, and that he would give the petition due consideration.

THE BASEBALL RULES COMMITTEE. It Goes Into Session Promising to Make

Few, If Any Changes. The Joint Committee on Baseball Playing Rules went into session in Parlor A. at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, at 11 o'clock this morning.

The Committee comprises Messrs. Spalding. Day and Rogers, of the League, and Messrs. Barnie, Sharsig and Chapman, of the Association.

Both Day and Spalding said the changes in the rules would be few, if any, and that the session would probably be a brief-one.

CRONIN'S LASTCRY. SUICIDE FOR LOVE.

Miss Gertrude Kimball, a Brooklyn society CHICAGO. Nov. 12.-The crowd which asbelle and member of several of Brooklyn's embled in Judge McConnell's court-room this amateur dramatic societies, committed suicide morning to hear the continuation of the Cronin at Woodhaven this morning by shooting herself murder case had yet in mind one of the most

> Gertrude was twenty years of age, very goodooking and had considerable reputation for ability on the amateur stage. About 5, 30 o'clock Gertrude went downstairs her mother heard a muffled report, as if from a pistol fired under cover. Hurrying into the house, she found Gertrude streaming down her dress to the floor. Mrs. Kimball shrieked for assistance, and her two sons, Walter and Henry, ran to her. She was wild with grief, and for a time it was thought that her reason had left her.

She was so worked up that the combined strength of her sons was necessary to hold her. Dr. Granf was immediately summoned and arrived about iffteen minutes after the shooting. He made a hasty examination and found that the ball, which was fired from a 38-calibre revolver had reached a vital spot.

Gertrude lingered for an hour, when she died. During the whole time she moaned in her agony, and her sufferings were intense. She murmured something several times but it was unnitelligible.

Mrs. William Hooper, Gertrude's sister, said: "All I know about the case is this: Mr. Frank Mills, who is I believe employed in some wholesale clothing house on Broadway, New York, called at the house last night about 7.30 o'clock and remained until about 10 o'clock.

"Gertrude seemed to be in a particularly bright mood, and was the creator of lots of fam.

"Shortly before 10 o'clock Mr. Mills bade Mrs. Kimball shricked for assistance, and her

The sensation of this morning was furnished by Mrs. Pauline Hoerbal, a German woman who lives near the Carlson cottage. Said she:

"I was passing the Carlson cottage on the night of May 4, sometime between 7 and 8 o'clock, when I saw two men in a buggy drive up to the cottage. One of them got out and went up the steps. He knocked; some one came to the door, and the man went in.

"He was big and broad-shouldered. He carried something like a satchel. It looked as though it might be a surgeon's case."

"What kind of a horse was it that drew the buggy?"

oright mood, and was the creator of lots of fim.

"Shortly before 10 o'clock Mr. Mills hade Gertrude and us all good-by, as he said he had been ordered to Philadelphia and from there to Boston, where he expected to remain some time.

"After his departure Gertrude kissed us all good-night, and I heard nothing more from her until this morning, when I was summoned to her bedside to see her die. Her suicide cannot be accounted for unless it is that she died because she loved a man who, though engaged to marry her, refused to make her his wife.

"Mills and my sister had been lovers for the past three years. He is about twenty-eight years old. The couple were to have been married in September last, but for some reason the ceremony was abruptly broken off."
